

ASIAN TASK FORCE
Against Domestic Violence

2013 ANNUAL REPORT

Dear Friends,

2014 marks the 20th anniversary of the first, and still the only, emergency shelter for Asian domestic violence survivors in Massachusetts and New England. ATASK was founded with the vision and energy of Reverend Cheng Imm Tan, who mobilized a group of volunteers in Boston to address important gaps in resources and services for the growing Asian immigrant population. Tan realized then what many more people know now, that survivors are more inclined to seek services from organizations like ATASK that understand their culture, language, and background, and the complexities and obstacles community members face when attempting to access services — challenges such as language barriers, financial dependency, and legal and immigration issues.

At last year's Silk Road Gala, ATASK honored Rev. Tan and Ken Morin, along with First Lady Diane and Governor Deval Patrick, First Lady Angela and Mayor Tom Menino, Atsuko Toko and Larry Fish, Kija Kim and Jim Aylward, and Mary Lee, MD and Paul Lee, for supporting and sustaining ATASK's work over the years. At the Longwood Symphony Orchestra's concert in May 2013 we also honored our late Board member Catherine Coburn as one of our inaugural "Mothers of Invention."

This coming year ATASK will be establishing a domestic violence advocate internship program in Catherine's name. We will also be celebrating the 20th anniversary of our shelter at a May 10 performance of the play, Where the Mountain Meets the Moon, based on the book by Grace Lin, at Wheelock Family Theatre. This event is a wonderful bookend to a similar event twenty years ago. ATASK raised community awareness, and funds, to open our shelter at a performance of the play, Dragonwings, by author Laurence Yep, at Boston's Emerson (now Cutler) Majestic Theatre.

The ATASK Board and staff are grateful for the generosity of our extended family of community partners, donors, and volunteers in support of our mission. We look forward to celebrating our 20th anniversary with you as we recognize the courage and resilience of thousands of families who have trusted ATASK to assist them in leading lives free of violence.

With gratitude,

Audrey Paek
Board Chair

Linda Chin
President

Most of ATASK's adult clients are women who are immigrants from Cambodia, China, India/South Asia, and Vietnam. They have limited resources, do not speak English as their primary language, and may be financially dependent on their abuser.

ATASK is a United Way affiliate and receives funding from the Federal, State, and local governments, as well as private sources. The Massachusetts Department of Children and Families supports ATASK's emergency shelter and community-based sites in Boston and Lowell. Other government sources include the US Department of Justice, Office on Violence Against Women, MA Department of Public Health, and Boston and Lowell Community Development Block Grants.

ATASK is the only provider of culturally and linguistically-specific shelter and advocacy services for Asian survivors in Massachusetts and New England. In 2013, staff responded to 909 calls to our 24/7 multilingual helpline. ATASK's shelter served 45 clients and provided 6,289 bed nights. ATASK assisted 437 clients with safety planning, housing, healthcare, public benefits, employment, immigration and legal issues, mental health referrals, and financial literacy/life skills at our community-based sites.

ATASK garnered public and private support to raise awareness and funds to open an emergency shelter in 1994. In 2014, ATASK celebrates the courage and resilience of the hundreds of families who have passed through the shelter in the past two decades, and now live in violence-free homes.

A Survivor's Story

I got married in Vietnam in 2003, and joined my husband in the United States in 2008. I had dreams of having a normal, happy family life here. Unfortunately, this did not happen. When I arrived, I found out my husband had a serious addiction to heroin. He would physically accost me when he needed money to buy more drugs. When I tried to talk to him about his drug use, we would argue and he would end up hurting me.

I became pregnant, and gave birth to a beautiful, healthy boy, but I was very worried. I knew my house was not safe, and I did not want to raise my son surrounded by violence. My doctor in the hospital contacted social services. They were very concerned about my living situation and advised me to leave my home, but my son was so small, and I wanted to keep my family together. I did not have any family or friends in the US, and I did not know what else to do, so for two years, I lived in a very bad home. Finally, with the help of the Department of Children and Families (DCF), I decided to leave. DCF put me in touch with ATASK, because they said they had staff who could speak Vietnamese.

I called ATASK's helpline and was assigned a Vietnamese advocate the next day who met with me in the Boston office. The advocate helped me better understand my situation and options. There was no space at ATASK's shelter, so she helped me find another shelter in Western Massachusetts. They were very nice there, but it was hard for me. I did not speak English and they did not speak Vietnamese. I felt all alone even though there were people all around me.

After a few months, I was able to transfer to ATASK's emergency shelter in Eastern Massachusetts. The shelter had staff that spoke different Asian languages, and there were other women there from China, Vietnam, and Cambodia, so I felt more comfortable. The shelter staff helped me adjust to my new community. They taught me how to use public transportation, made sure I had food stamps and WIC, got me a cell phone, and transferred our medical care. They also helped me apply to public housing. ATASK even helped me find a Vietnamese support group for domestic violence survivors. My life was not spinning out of control anymore.

For the first time in a long while, I started to feel better. I was surrounded by people who wanted to help me. My advocate found a pro bono lawyer to help me with my restraining order and my divorce. She would go to court with me and help me understand what was going on. I was grateful that I did not have to go through all this by myself. ATASK's children's and family program also helped me with my son. I could tell they really cared about him. They gave him clothes and toys, and played with him. They helped me find child care for my son so I could have time to go to school or get a job.

I knew I needed to improve my English, so ATASK enrolled me in their ESOL class. I enjoyed going because I got to meet other people who went through the same things as me, and we supported one another. Once I was able to speak more English, I felt more confident. I was ready to take my next step, so ATASK helped me get a scholarship from one of ATASK's community partners, Web of Benefit. I got to go to school to get licensed as a manicurist. I got certified and was able to get a job. Even though the work is hard and the hours are long, I was happy that I could provide for my son.

I lived in the shelter for 10 months and felt ready to leave but my public housing application had not been approved yet. ATASK then offered me a chance to enter their transitional housing program. I got to choose where I was going to live, so I picked a place near my son's day care so that it would be easier for me to balance my schedule. Since I was working, I could no longer take English classes, so ATASK got me a tutor who met me on my day off. I was living in my own apartment with my son, I had a job, and I felt safe. Life was starting to feel normal again.

I then got public housing in a Boston suburb. This was going to be my final move. I knew it would be a very good place to raise my son, but I was scared because I would be starting all over again in a new place. ATASK supported me through this change as well. They helped me get another job and found a wonderful daycare for my son, and I soon got adjusted to my new home.

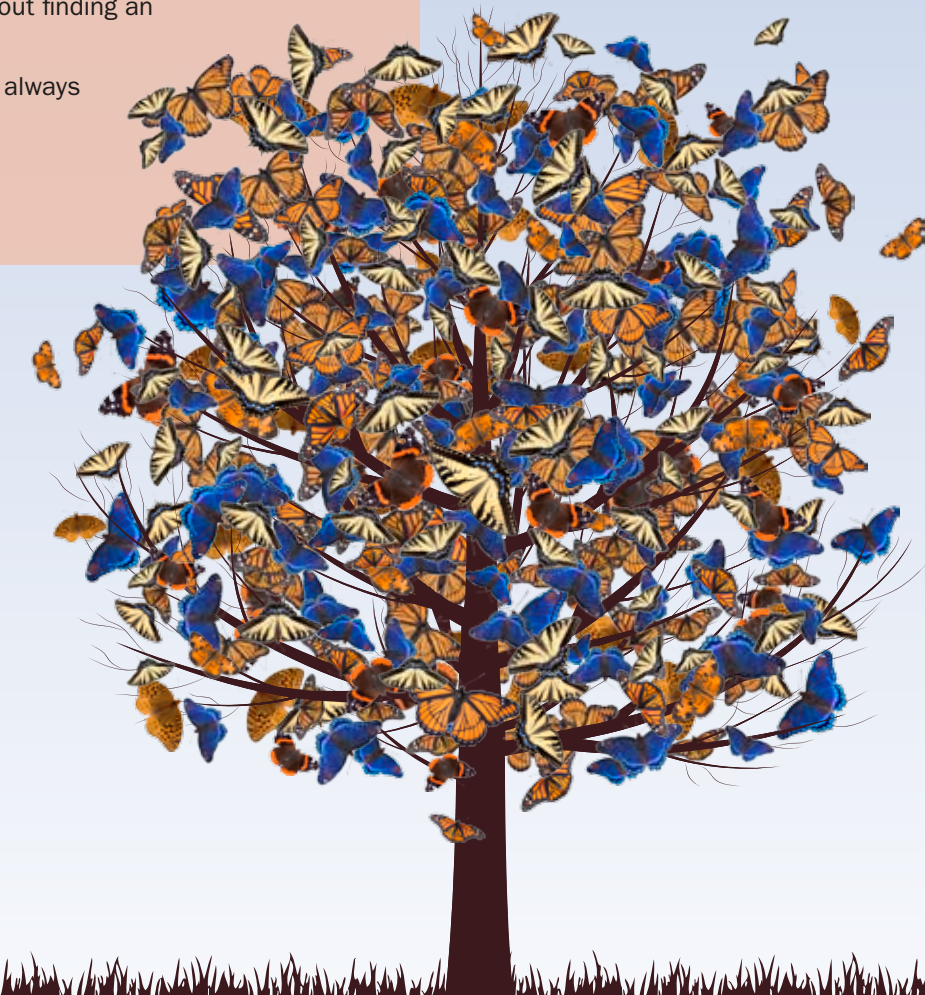

Not too long ago, my life was falling apart. Today, I am so proud to say that I am providing my son with a good home, and a safe and happy life. I even got my driver's license and bought a car. But this is not the end of my journey. I will continue to work hard, and now I dream about finding an even better job. I know I can do it.

ATASK has always supported me with my dreams, and now I know I should always reach for my dreams. Thank you ATASK for giving me back my confidence and making me feel good about myself again.

ATASK's on-site legal advocacy program offers increased access to much-needed legal consultation and representation. In 2013, the program assisted over 127 clients at the Boston and Lowell sites.

ATASK's on-site Life Skills/ESOL program served 29 clients in 2013. All students improved their English proficiency and gained financial literacy, computer, job readiness, and other life skills.

ATASK provided housing and support services for 8 families (8 adults and 12 children) in the transitional housing program in 2013. Transitional housing clients participate in the program for 1.5 to 2 years, and then move on to long-term housing.

Community Connections

ATASK maintains close connections with its communities to support its mission.

The goal of ATASK's education and outreach program is to increase awareness of, and linkages to our culturally and linguistically relevant services for domestic violence survivors. In 2013, staff:

- participated in 35 community outreach events
- provided information to 16,700 individuals
- distributed 4,665 brochures and palm cards on domestic violence and ATASK's 24-hour helpline
- trained 16 youth to be peer leaders in our Youth Empowerment Project, and educated nearly 400 youth in area high schools and middle schools about teen dating violence prevention and healthy relationships.

ATASK gives special thanks to the following community partners and supporters for their collaborative spirit, and passion for our work:

- Bob's Furniture, and Ted English, for continued support of our transitional housing program
- Ropes & Gray, and Jekkie Kim, for pro-bono legal counsel
- Verizon Foundation, and Stephanie Lee, for assistance in providing emergency phones for our clients
- Longwood Symphony Orchestra, and Lisa Barr, for the May 2013 benefit concert
- Joanne Chang, Gish Jen, and Lori Lander for our very special book signing
- George Li, The Li Family, and Young Concert Artists for the magnificent musical tribute at our 2013 Silk Road Gala

Volunteers

We are grateful to the following individuals who generously give their time and talent to further the efforts of ATASK.

In 2013, ATASK introduced the Community Leaders Council, a new group of volunteers dedicated to raising awareness about the organization. Under the leadership of co-chairs YeSeul Kim and Marina Dang, the CLC will help further the visibility of ATASK in the community, and organize special events.

For the 2013 Silk Road Gala, we would like to thank the steering committee: Monnica Chan, Mongchour Chau, Mimi Do, Sidd Goyal, Vicky Hong, Lili Lee, Ana Leon, Kozue Sawame, Monica Tescon, Jay Trivedi, and Szeman Tse, and special supporters Emilie Chang of Pink Orchid Weddings, Frank Miranda of A Better Resolution, Eddie O'Connell of O'Connell Design Build, and Janet Wu of WHDH/7News. Also, thanks to all the volunteers who helped on the day of the Gala to make for a successful event.

We would also like to thank the many interns and volunteers who every day provide program and administrative support to our three locations in the community, and assist with fundraising activity throughout the year.
